stead of under the rotunda of the Capitol here, or in Central Park, New York city, the latter piace being recommended by Mr. Wanamaker.

"Mr. Dixon read a telegram from Mr. Wanamaker setting forth New York city's claim to the honor. It reads:

"Those privileged to leave the United States to fight for the freedom of the world embarked from the harbor of New York. Those who had the privilege of living returned home through New York harbor. It was in New York city, therefore, where the nation's welcome was given to the returning victorious troops, to the returning victorious troops and it is the place above all others hallowed as the shrine for the spirit that never returned. I believe the entire nation will concur in the holy sentiment that this sacred ground should be the resting place for the unknown soldier who will typify the great here ideals, relies the processor of the second size of t total 2,148, and that it would be possible to select a body for the bonor which could not be identified in any way, thus could not be identified in any way, thus preventing any sectional or individual tributes. It was because of the belief that the honor should be made a national tribute that the committee favored Washington as the place for interment.

Gen. Pershing suggested that the interment be in the amphitheatre at Arlineton.

terment be in the amphitheatre at Arlington.

"I think that a fitting tribue should be paid to the unknown dead," said the General. "We have had no national expression to these heroes, and this would give the people an opportunity to show their appreciation of the valiant services rendered by these soldiers. I hope that the ceremony can be made a national event. I would suggest that the country pause for a brief period on Memorial Day and pay a silent tribute to the unknown dead. In that way all the people could participate. The body should be brought back on a battleship and accorded the highest honors. The President and all the high officials of the Government should be invited to attend the ceremony.

the Government should be invited to at-tend the ceremony.

"I would prefer that the interment be in the Arlington amphitheatre instead of the rotunda of the Capitol or in New York. I would suggest that the body be one of those who fell in the battle of the Argonne, the greatest major of-fensive in which the American army participated."
